Editorial Review

Review

'Traditional works of geopolitics have stopped at the atmosphere's edge, grounded in geography, economics and demographics. Nayef Al-Rodhan has expanded classical geopolitical considerations to include societal, health and the environment. In this book, he elevates geopolitics into space. The result is an analysis that challenges our assumptions about power and space power.'

- Michael Krepon, Co-founder of the Stimson Center, Washington, USA

'A welcome 'outside of the box' analysis of outer space, geopolitics and the foundations of space power.'

- Theresa Hitchens, Director of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), Geneva, Switzerland

'Dr. Nayef Al-Rodhan's book provides a first rate summary of key aspects of current space policies. It also shows how space adds new and important elements to many policy areas on Earth, but also has a life of its own, as a new field of policy, strategy and geopolitics. Much of the difficulty in grasping space issues derives from this double status.'

- Laurence Nardon, Senior Research Fellow and Head of the United States Program and the Space Policy Program at the Institut français des relations internationales (IFRI), Paris, France
