The Devil's Highway By Harold Bell Wright, John Lebar

By Harold Bell Wright and his son, Gilbert Munger Wright, who used the pen name John Lebar. Wright did a lot to help his sons establish successful careers. He undoubtedly did the most, and agonized the most, trying to help his oldest son Gilbert become successful as a writer and producer. Speculation that Gilbert wrote the entire book while Dad added only his name to help it sell better is not true. In a letter to his son, Norman, dated February 10, 1944, Wright offered these details: "In 1930 I figured a way to help Gilbert and his little family to full financial freedom. I proposed that he collaborate with me in writing a novel. I said that for his share in the collaboration he should receive all that the magazine serial rights paid, and all that the motion picture rights paid. For my share I would take the book royalties only.
