Editorial Review

From Library Journal

In October 1984, the Polish priest and Solidarity activist Father Jerzy Popieluszko was abducted along a public highway and killed, his body dumped into a reservoir. Four agents of the Interior Ministry, led by Grzegorz Piotrowski, were quickly arrested and convicted after a show-trial. The authors, correspondents for Time magazine and the London Times, have painstakingly re-created the lives of the two antagonists, and especially the events which brought them to that fatal encounter. The two lives vividly portray the dual personality of postwar Poland: its abiding religious faith and the demands of the current civil order.

Questions about the ultimate responsibility for the death are raised, but cannot be answered from the facts available. Marcia L. Sprules, Univ. of South Dakota Lib., Vermillion
