

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education)

From Information Age Publishing

Download now

Read Online ➔

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

A volume in International Review of History Education Series Editor Peter Lee, Rosalyn Ashby, Stuart Foster As educators in the United States and Europe develop national history standards for K-12 students, the question of what to do with national history canons is a subject of growing concern. Should national canons still be the foundation for the teaching of history? Do national canons develop citizenship or should they be modified to accommodate the new realities of globalization? Or should they even be discarded outright? These questions become blurred by the debates over preserving national heritages, by so-called 'history wars' or 'culture wars,' and by debates over which pedagogical frameworks to use. These canon and pedagogical debates often overlap, creating even more confusion. A misconceived "skills vs. content" debate often results. Teaching students to think chronologically and historically is not the same as teaching a national heritage or a cosmopolitan outlook. But what exactly is the difference? Policy-makers and opinion leaders often confuse the pedagogical desirability of using a 'framework' for studying history with their own efforts to reaffirm the centrality of national identity rooted in a vision of their nation's history as a way of inculcating citizenship and patriotism. These are the issues discussed in this volume." Today's students are citizens of the world and must be taught to think in global, supranational terms. At the same time, the traditionalists have a point when they argue that the ideal of the nation-state is the cultural glue that has traditionally held society together, and that social cohesion depends on creating and inculcating a common national culture in the schools. From an educational perspective, the problem is how to teach chronological thinking at all. How are we to reconcile the social, political and intellectual realities of a globalizing world with the continuing need for individuals to function locally as citizens of a nation-state, who share a common past, a common culture, and a common political destiny? Is it a duty of history education to create a frame of reference, and if so, what kind of frame of reference should this be? How does frame-of-reference knowledge relate to canonical knowledge and the body of knowledge of history as a whole?

 Download National History Standards: The Problem of the Can ...pdf

 Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the C ...pdf

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education)

From Information Age Publishing

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

A volume in International Review of History Education Series Editor Peter Lee, Rosalyn Ashby, Stuart Foster As educators in the United States and Europe develop national history standards for K-12 students, the question of what to do with national history canons is a subject of growing concern. Should national canons still be the foundation for the teaching of history? Do national canons develop citizenship or should they be modified to accommodate the new realities of globalization? Or should they even be discarded outright? These questions become blurred by the debates over preserving national heritages, by so-called 'history wars' or 'culture wars,' and by debates over which pedagogical frameworks to use. These canon and pedagogical debates often overlap, creating even more confusion. A misconceived "skills vs. content" debate often results. Teaching students to think chronologically and historically is not the same as teaching a national heritage or a cosmopolitan outlook. But what exactly is the difference? Policy-makers and opinion leaders often confuse the pedagogical desirability of using a 'framework' for studying history with their own efforts to reaffirm the centrality of national identity rooted in a vision of their nation's history as a way of inculcating citizenship and patriotism. These are the issues discussed in this volume." Today's students are citizens of the world and must be taught to think in global, supranational terms. At the same time, the traditionalists have a point when they argue that the ideal of the nation-state is the cultural glue that has traditionally held society together, and that social cohesion depends on creating and inculcating a common national culture in the schools. From an educational perspective, the problem is how to teach chronological thinking at all. How are we to reconcile the social, political and intellectual realities of a globalizing world with the continuing need for individuals to function locally as citizens of a nation-state, who share a common past, a common culture, and a common political destiny? Is it a duty of history education to create a frame of reference, and if so, what kind of frame of reference should this be? How does frame-of-reference knowledge relate to canonical knowledge and the body of knowledge of history as a whole?

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Bibliography

- Sales Rank: #4563776 in Books
- Published on: 2009-04-01
- Released on: 2009-04-01
- Original language: English
- Number of items: 1
- Dimensions: 9.21" h x .75" w x 6.14" l, 1.03 pounds
- Binding: Paperback
- 332 pages

 Download National History Standards: The Problem of the Can ...pdf

 Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the C ...pdf

Download and Read Free Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

Editorial Review

Review

"Nothing can better serve the promotion of a deeply humanistic but analytic history in precollegiate classrooms than discourse among an internationally diverse body of reform-minded history educators. This books delivers just that. The essays in National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History, by leading history educators on both sides of the Atlantic, offer cogent critiques of the tangled reform efforts on how history should be taught in the schools as well as sophisticated models for constructing both national and trans-national history for the young people who will determine the course of twenty-first- century human affairs." Gary B. Nash, Director, National Center for History in the Schools, UCLA"

About the Author

"Nothing can better serve the promotion of a deeply humanistic but analytic history in precollegiate classrooms than discourse among an internationally diverse body of reform-minded history educators. This books delivers just that. The essays in National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History, by leading history educators on both sides of the Atlantic, offer cogent critiques of the tangled reform efforts on how history should be taught in the schools as well as sophisticated models for constructing both national and trans-national history for the young people who will determine the course of twenty-first- century human affairs." Gary B. Nash, Director, National Center for History in the Schools, UCLA

Users Review

From reader reviews:

Armando Rodgers:

Book is to be different for each grade. Book for children till adult are different content. We all know that that book is very important for people. The book National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) seemed to be making you to know about other expertise and of course you can take more information. It is rather advantages for you. The publication National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) is not only giving you much more new information but also to be your friend when you really feel bored. You can spend your own spend time to read your reserve. Try to make relationship using the book National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education). You never feel lose out for everything when you read some books.

Margaret Morales:

The experience that you get from National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) is the more deep you looking the information that hide into the words the more you get enthusiastic about reading it. It does not mean that this book is hard to comprehend but National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) giving you thrill feeling of reading. The article writer conveys their point in a number of way that can be understood by means of anyone who read it because the author of this publication is well-known enough. This kind of book also makes your own vocabulary increase well. That makes it easy to understand then can go along with you, both in printed or e-book style are available. We propose you for having that National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) instantly.

Robert Collado:

People live in this new day time of lifestyle always attempt to and must have the time or they will get lot of stress from both day to day life and work. So , if we ask do people have time, we will say absolutely without a doubt. People is human not just a robot. Then we ask again, what kind of activity are there when the spare time coming to anyone of course your answer will certainly unlimited right. Then do you try this one, reading guides. It can be your alternative with spending your spare time, the actual book you have read is usually National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education).

Mary Peterson:

That e-book can make you to feel relax. This kind of book National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) was vibrant and of course has pictures on the website. As we know that book National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) has many kinds or variety. Start from kids until youngsters. For example Naruto or Investigator Conan you can read and think you are the character on there. Therefore , not at all of book are generally make you bored, any it offers up you feel happy, fun and relax. Try to choose the best book to suit your needs and try to like reading in which.

Download and Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing #UYM41TIJP5B

Read National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing for online ebook

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Free PDF d0wnl0ad, audio books, books to read, good books to read, cheap books, good books, online books, books online, book reviews epub, read books online, books to read online, online library, greatbooks to read, PDF best books to read, top books to read National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing books to read online.

Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing ebook PDF download

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Doc

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Mobipocket

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing EPub

UYM41TIJP5B: National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing