Editorial Review

About the Author

Samir Elias has a Doctorate in Engineering from the University of Massachusetts and a Masters in economics from the University of Technology in the UK. He worked as a research engineer developing new products at two different private companies in the US. In 1994 he raised venture capital to start his own engineering company which was sold to an international company in 1999. Between 1994 and 1997 he was involved in a real estate investment partnership in Ohio and Massachusetts. During that period he was intrigued by stock and option trading and how mathematical principles can be applied to enhancing trading and investment profits. In 1997, using his experience in computer modeling of multiphase dynamic systems which was the focus of his doctorate dissertation, he developed a mathematical approach using convergence divergence charts to model long term stock movements. This model was simplified enough to obtain effective results using hand drawn charts once a week. With the proliferation of the internet and increased interest and accessibility of short term trading he developed unique combinations of technical indicators to predict short term stock movements with over 75% accuracy. In 1997, he sold his real estate partnership and started trading part time at Insight Securities in Wichita KS until they closed in late 1998. Presently, he is a full time option and stock trader and investor.
